

for this month.

Tapeworms from fleas may be seen as small white pieces of dried fecal material around the anus or on the floor. Tapeworms can rob a pet of important nutrients and can cause weight loss and poor hair care. Some single-bite flea collars and even a cat's own saliva can cause them to tickle their tails. Cats that feel itchy from the bite can become cranky and act out aggressively as they are getting bit. Use consistent techniques. These strategies can cause enough self-trauma to create secondary bacterial infections, which will add to the itchy feeling. Clinical signs of a flea bite would be hair loss, scabs, head scratching, or changes in attitude. It is not normal for your cat to be scratching his body like this.

The great news is that the same treatment for heartworm prevention also keeps fleas away, and includes a flea birth control to prevent the eggs from hatching on your house. Call your veterinarian for a six-pack Revolution to make sure your indoor cat (and the people in your house) never need to worry about fleas.

In addition to the infections that can strike your indoor cat, the other can come as occurring from within your cat's body. As a cat hits the middle age years of four to five years old, their body can start to change. These cats will be an even greater risk if they have already gained weight over your pet's life. In people, weight gain puts a lot of stress on the heart, which can lead to heart disease, diabetes, arthritis, and urinary tract problems. At our practice, we find these cats in the middle as they age. As your pet ages, we see these diseases with greater frequency, and also see other diseases such as hypertension, kidney disease, and cancer.

By thoroughly examining your indoor cat once a year we are looking for early clinical signs of these different diseases. Because every cat has different genes, we use some unique cat starting samples to confirm or rule out disease. As a veterinarian, we recommend coming that sample to confirm or rule out disease. For example, we recommend coming that sample to confirm or rule out disease. For example, we recommend coming that sample to confirm or rule out disease.
